SAMPLING

One of the most important processes in which we are involved, and among our core strengths, is sampling. The concept of design is being drawn up and the risk analysis performed by the development and production teams during the initial phase. They create sets of design samples, which are planned and developed in collaboration with their clients. The appropriate colours and textures shall be employed to keep up with the evolving fashion trends.

Once the finalised sample specifications have been established, the next stage will involve functions for procuring and ordering equipment, conducting tests and performing trials. The quality of the sample is excellent, thanks to our efficiency workers and modern equipment.

GARMENTING

The garments section is fitted with the most recent machinery and other ancillary equipment in order to produce contemporary cotton T-shirts. This division has been scientifically established and is equipped with ample light, space and the required facilities for workers' comfort. In order to be perfectly fitted, each cotton T-shirt must be accurately measured.
